I stumble
Following the path
Blinded by life's deception
Confusion leads to obscurity
A flicker of light I crave
Darkness all around
I falter

Rubbing razor against flesh,
I'd bleed for you.
Dig deeper into my soul
Carving the pain of my life.
The dead tremble in fear,
Blood trickles upon a rose,
Tears fall upon a feather,
Emotions seep through my pores.
Darkness covers me,
The graveyard of my soul.

Your flesh cries for me,
Your skin, my clothing;
This covering I need.

My eyes delight in your shelter,
The lasting power of immortality.
To touch is not enough;
I must wear perfection.
Becoming the mannequin
Of this lifelong transformation;
The design of time will be altered
Through my artistry.

I carve my sin deeper,
Peeling your delicate flesh,
Careful not to harm
The fragile nature of this gift.
Each cut a modification;
Each stitch a revision
To the putrid skin I dwell in.
Death grants new life.

Metamorphic,
I model in your fashion,
Transfer your existence,
And mold new life.
Your flesh, my covering;
Your skin, my clothing.
Bodily perfection I seek.
Become my immortality.

My unholy chanter
Spills interlocked lyrics.
As his voice becomes breath,
I reach for his air
Granting this oral gestation.
Digest my torso,
Verbalize my pleasure
As I embrace your grave,
Catacomb of love.

Your words I savor.
Sweet is the tongue of rhyme,
Orgasmic is your song.
It tangos with my soul,
Writhes with my spirit.
To taste is not enough;
I must hear your anguish,
Feel your fire,
Witness the climax that feeds my pride.

Selfish is the light
That hides your moon
And unquenchable desire.
Your hymns fall like whispers
Blood-red, your departing lips.
Our kiss
Makes me a bittersweet scarlet,
Welcoming this sin.
But in your death, I'm holy.

Vamp by night
Souls for the taking
Life's grave, an empty vessel
No escape from this life of feasting
Your blood entices rapture
Color of our love
Pale by sight
